Citizen wins at city hall

► Leader of anti-shark-fin charge taking his campaign to provincial, federal levels

ANGELA MULLINS
@METRONEWS.CA

One might say Jeremy Larivee accomplished something many city councillors can only dream of.

Less than a week after his entry into city politics, the 27-year-old Londoner chalked up a victory at city hall on Monday, winning unanimous support for a ban on shark-fin products. It's all thanks to what Larivee, an electrician, considers a guiding principle. "If you let passion drive you, you'll triumph," he said.

In this case, it took passion and a fair bit of legwork. Larivee and a small army of volunteers went on an out-and-out campaign after the proposed ban got a cool reception at a committee meeting on Nov. 15.

That campaign included calling councillors and hand-delivering copies of the documentary Sharkwater to many of their homes. The film — which shows fins being removed from sharks and their carcasses dumped back in the water — was key, Larivee said.

"It's hard to ignore the issue after you see that," he said.

While he's never taken on city hall, Larivee and his wife have been trying to raise awareness of marine issues for some time.

The couple started Ocean Voice London about a year ago, after Larivee's wife came face to face with dolphin slaughter during a trip to Japan. The group has about 10 active members, which means others had to be recruited for the shark-fin shakedown.

For Monday night's council meeting, leaders of the campaign pulled together about 20 people, all of whom cheered when councillors approved the ban. Between last Thursday and 4:30 p.m. Monday, the group collected 820 signatures for an online petition supporting a new bylaw.

Winning the battle was a huge surprise, Larivee said.

"I called my councillor, Bill Armstrong, back in August about this, but because of some other issues that were going on at the time ... he said hold it off a bit," Larivee said. "I called the city on (Nov. 14) to put it forward again and found out it was on the agenda."

The victory could help bring other animal-rights issues to the forefront, said Florine Morrison, founder of the London Animal Alliance and co-founder of Animal Outreach. "It's encouraging," she said.

Party decks, box seats and locker-room upgrades are just a few of the things David Martin is promising for Labatt Park.

Overall, the London Rippers owner wants give the park somewhat of a facelift before his baseball team hits the diamond. While he's not talking details at this point, Martin expects his plans — to be rolled out in the spring — will up the "excitement" level at the field.

"Ultimately, we're here to provide a great form of entertainment for the city," he said yesterday.

Designs for that work along with launching the London Rippers merchandise line are some of the things Martin's management team has been working on in the past week as controversy swirls about the brand.

That, and the Rippers are building support despite their critics. The team's Facebook page hit 500 fans yesterday afternoon, an online petition endorsing the team's Jack-the-Ripperish spin is getting some attention and more than 200 people are following on Twitter.

Martin said sales of merchandise — which officially started Monday — are "well into the four figures." Interest is coming from as far away as Japan and New Zealand, he said.

"We wanted to associate the name London with baseball, and I think we've accomplished that," he said. "At the end of the day

I know we have a lot of support. I don't think people need someone else to be their moral compass in town."

Adam Buckley totally agrees with at least the last point. The 30-year-old Londoner says he isn't rushing out to brand himself with a Rippers logo, but he's thrown his support behind the team online.

"We're such an ultraservice city, and it's nice to see someone say, 'Look, this is what our team's going to be.'"

Unknown cause in house fire

The London Fire Department was investigating a mid-day house fire on Monday.

Just after 2 p.m. a fire started on Snowden Crescent near Adelaide Street and Southdale Road. Fire damage was limited to the basement, but smoke damaged other parts of the house.

Fire officials say no one was home when the fire started and no firefighters were injured putting out the blaze. But the smoke did kill the family cat.

Platoon chief Paul Carew says they arrived to find an intense fire. "We encountered extremely thick smoke conditions when the front door was breached, which indicated that the fire was well seeded and had been smouldering for quite some time," Carew said. AM980/AM980.CA

Election platform forms basis of throne speech

CHRIS YOUNG/THE CANADIAN PRESS

► Ontario Lt.-Gov. David Onley delivers the throne speech to mark the opening of the Ontario Legislative Assembly at Queen's Park in Toronto yesterday.

Liberals repeat key promises for first session of Ontario legislature since winning minority on Oct. 6

There was little sign Ontario's Liberals have been reduced to a minority government in yesterday's throne speech, which sounded a lot like their campaign platform.

The speech repeated key Liberal promises. They include introducing a $1,500 home renovation tax credit for seniors, cutting college and university tuition fees by 30 per cent starting Jan. 1, and taking the next steps towards all-day GO train commuter service in the Golden Horseshoe.

The 12-page throne speech, read by Lt.-Gov. David Onley, said the Liberals would govern based on ideas they put forward during the fall campaign, and spoke about the "four-year mandate" they were given.

"Your government will implement the plan it campaigned on, and Ontario's elected it to carry out, as a strong, steady government," Onley said.

The government said the seniors' home-renovation tax credit, which would cost $136 million a year, combined with an increase in home-care services, will stimulate the economy by creating jobs, and keep people out of more expensive hospitals and long-term care homes.

"These two initiatives would improve seniors' quality of life by allowing them to stay in their own homes longer, and provide a real, tangible benefit to taxpayers by saving long-term (health) care costs," said Onley.

Some details will come today when Finance Minister Dwight Duncan delivers his fall economic update in the legislature, but the throne speech spoke about dealing with the "new global economic reality," without offering concrete steps.

Health Canada rapped over slow drug info

- Public should be told about risks sooner, says auditor general
- Tories warned: Don't let cost-cutting increase the dangers

"Health Canada is slow to act on potential safety issues related to drugs already on the market."

JOHN WIERSEMA

The public is waiting far too long to be warned of significant risks about the drugs they take, the federal auditor general said yesterday.

It's only the latest example of risk caused by rampant information mismanagement that is undercutting work in many federal departments, said interim auditor general John Wiersema.

He warned the government to make sure things don't get worse as it goes about a major cost-cutting exercise over the coming years.

"We have found that poor information is a widespread, chronic problem in the federal government," Wiersema said in an overview of government operations.

"Managers are not systematically collecting and using the information they need to manage their programs, and they are not held accountable for this."

The audit of Health Canada found the department has an archaic system of monitoring that can take years to tell the public that some drugs already on the market come with significant risks.

In one case, a drug that was being prescribed for epilepsy, migraines, psychiatric conditions or weight loss was found to be linked to birth defects.

But it took six months for the brand-name drug to include a warning, and almost two years for generic producers to be told they had to change their labels and warnings.

In another case, the United States was already warning in 2006 that the long-term benefits of low-dose ASA could be eroded by taking ibuprofen.

But in Canada, a review took more than three years, and orders to change labelling for the public are still not fully in place.

"Health Canada is slow to act on potential safety issues," Wiersema said in a release.

Supermodel adviser blames tabloid hacking for sacking

► Inquiry set up by British PM following News of the World scandal
► Victims' lawyers accuse Daily Mail of trying to intimidate witnesses

Elle Macpherson fired her business adviser for leaking secrets when journalists were actually getting juicy details about the supermodel by hacking into her phone, the former aide told a British inquiry into media ethics yesterday.

In testimony, Mary-Ellen Field described how she lost both her job for Macpherson and one at an advisory firm because of the unfounded suspicions — a double-blow that was all the more serious because she was in poor health. She didn't identify her illness.

Field was one of several victims of press intrusion testifying yesterday at Britain's Royal Courts of Justice. The inquiry was set up after the scandal over phone hacking and other tactics used at the News of the World, which was closed by media mogul Rupert Murdoch in July. The inquiry plans to issue a report next year and could recommend major changes to the way the media in Britain are regulated.

Field said her relationship with Macpherson was once close, but it fell apart after the model's intimate secrets began appearing in the press in 2005. Macpherson became convinced that Field was an alcoholic and ordered her to go to a U.S. rehabilitation clinic.

Field said she was shocked by the allegations, but went along with Macpherson's recommendation. "I have a severely disabled child who can never look after himself, so walking away from a high-paying position is not a good idea," Field said.

Even though staff at the clinic said Field was not an alcoholic, Macpherson fired her anyway, and Field lost her job at her firm shortly afterward. Although it has since emerged that the media leaks were the result of phone hacking, Field said she has not heard from Macpherson in years.

Soccer player Garry Flitcroft also told the court of his family's harassment by the media after the failure of a judicial bid to block news of his extramarital affair. And British comedian Steve Coogan claimed that he was warned in 2002 that Andy Coulson — then deputy editor of News of the World — would be lis-

WATCH YOURSELF, NOW EVERYONE ELSE CAN TOO

JUST SAYIN' ...

PAUL SULLIVAN
METRO

There was a time that if you wanted to stand naked on your patio, only the guy with the binoculars across the street would catch you in the act.

These days, thanks to Google Street View, everyone gets to look.

Just ask the woman in Miami who today finds that her naked foray onto her back stoop, captured by a passing Google Street View camera, yields more than two million results on the search engine of the same name.

Google Street View is supposed to be a helpful way for you to see your destination as it really looks, as opposed to a pointy B pin on a map. It is not supposed to offer a panorama of human folly, such as the casually careless naked lady, or the equally naked guy in Germany climbing out of the trunk of his car, or the guy walking his snake down the street, or various Brits mooning the passing camera, or the two Norwegian scuba divers running down the street on flippers, complete with tridents. (Why did the scuba divers cross the road?)

As the Street View cameras capture every square millimetre of the planet and resolution improves, it's only going to get worse. Or better, if you like to watch.

Google is self-correcting, and as soon as it learned about its naked-lady problem, it turned her into a pixelated blur, but only after the photos of the poor women spread across the Internet like the bird flu.

What do we expect when we combine the Internet with the latest surveillance technology? Google Street View has the potential to turn us all into everyday fugitives from scrutiny, trapped in a high-res corner with nowhere to hide.

It's not just that Big Brother is watching, although you know he is. It's also that little sister and Cousin Bert and Uncle Ernie and all Rabbit's friends and relations are watching as well.

Of course, not everyone sees that as a bad thing, such as the guy who found Google Street View to be an ideal way to expose himself to anyone who happened upon his sad, little — with an emphasis on little — sector of the galaxy.

For the rest of us, it's bad enough we have to wear clean underwear every day in case we get hit by a bus and have to be undressed by medical personnel. Now we also have to make sure, no matter where we are, to remember to wear clothes and, while we're at it, keep the nose mining to a minimum.

And smile, dammit.

DRIVING HIV TESTS HOME.

At one office of the Department of Motor Vehicles in Washington, D.C., motorists can get a driver's licence, temporary road-tax stickers and something wholly unrelated to the road: A free HIV test.

In a city with one of the highest percentages of residents living with HIV or AIDS, health officials have now test-driven the in-DMV testing and are finding that it works. So far, more than 5,000 people have been screened and received results while they wait.

"You have to meet people where they are," explained Sheila Brockington, who oversees HIV testing at the DMV office.

Initially, some officials doubted many people would test. Now, however, between 25 and 35 people get tested every day at the DMV location. Anyone who agrees gets $7 off their bill.

By now, the people who run the program have their pitch down. When people are in line, one of the testers approaches with the offer: Free tests, money off your bill and the promise that it won't hurt.

The orphan adoption

CONTRIBUTED

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

The new Martin Scorsese film is the director's first PG rated film in 18 years.

Hugo is a handsome 3D kid's flick featuring adventure, a broken robot, a toy store owner and one of the mainstays of central casting — an orphan.

There are all kinds of on-screen orphans, some lovable — The Jungle Book's Mowgli, Harry Potter — some not — Hannibal Lecter, Darth Vader — but few have been as memorable as Oliver Twist.

The youngster first captured people's imaginations 173 years ago as the title character in Charles Dickens's second book and debuted on film in 1908.

Since then there have been at least eleven adaptations of the story of an urchin who famously asked his cruel workhouse foreman for more gruel with the words, "Please sir, I want some more."

The most famous version of the story has to be Oliver!, a splashy 1968 all-singing all-dancing edition, which film critic Pauline Kael said was one of the few film adaptations of a stage musical superior to the original stage show.

Oliver had it rough. Much rougher than Little Orphan Annie, the perky red-haired waif adopted by the über-wealthy Daddy Warbucks, but for the actress who played her in the 1982 movie Annie there were some unpleasant moments.

The curly red wig Aileen Quinn wore was so itchy that a specially designed comb had to be created to give her some relief, and in order to get Annie's dog Sandy to realistically kiss her the prop master rubbed Alpo all over her face.

Still, Quinn says, "I just remember having the best time."

Unlike our next orphans, Oliver and Annie were decidedly earth-bound ragamuffins, but the movies have seen lots of alien children abandoned on our planet.

In Escape to Witch Mountain, Tony and Tia Malone's psychic abilities made them standouts at the orphanage and the moniker Clark Kent was the name his human adoptive parent's gave to Kal-El. You know him best as Superman.

Superman wasn't the only superhero orphan, however.

The death of Bruce Wayne's parents at the hand of the Joker prompted him to become the Caped Crusader. "You made me," he grumbles to the parent's killer in Batman.

Finally, Peter Parker's parents were Richard and Mary, CIA agents killed in the line of duty.

Rumour has it they will appear in the 2012 reboot, The Amazing Spider-Man, played by Campbell Scott and Embeth Davidtz.

Some of the new tunes have been around for a while — early versions of tracks Amen and Lullaby were originally recorded in 2007, while Cohen performed new tune The Darkness during his recent world tour. Arthur Christmas

Genre: Comedy/Drama
Director: Sarah Smith
Stars: James McAvoy, Hugh Laurie

Arthur Christmas not only answers the mystery of how Santa Claus delivers billions of presents in one night but it shows how the now high-tech computer-operated system is flawed. When one girl doesn't get her gift, Santa's inept son (McAvoy) sets off to ensure Christmas isn't ruined. For all its familiar themes, Arthur delivers enough clever laughs and eye-popping scenery to entertain kiddies hungry for holiday fare. STEVE GOW

The Muppets

Genre: Comedy/Musical
Director: James Bobin
Stars: Amy Adams, Jason Segel and Chris Cooper

There may have been better films released in 2011, but this critic is hard pressed to think of a better movie than The Muppets, writer/star Jason Segel and director James Bobbin's re-vamp of the beloved '70s TV series as well as the expanded big screen franchise that followed. It's perfect entertainment, ferociously funny and far out. Segel is perfect as Gary, who lives a candy-coated life with his muppet obsessed, felt and faux fur covered brother Walter, and his sunny, long suffering girlfriend Mary (Amy Adams). When the trio head to Hollywood to make Walter's dreams of meeting Kermit and company come true, they become embroiled in a scheme to save the muppet theatre from a scowling, rapping oil baron (Chris Cooper). Filled to the gills with chirpy, catchy pop songs and subversive gags, The Muppets works as both a nostalgia piece for parents and a wild romp for kids.

On Monday night's Late Night With Jimmy Fallon the band picked some inflammatory music for featured guest (and Republican presidential candidate) Michele Bachmann to walk into.

The song they picked? Lyin' Ass B— by Fishbone. And it wasn't a slip-up. Questlove even told fans and followers to pay attention via Twitter: "aight late night walkon song devotees: you love it when we snark: this next one takes the cake. Ask around cause I aint tweeting the title," he wrote. Then he even took it a step further by tweeting a link to the album and making fans guess which song they picked.

As Spin points out, The Roots often use songs to express their feelings. Two notable examples are playing Milli Vanilli when notorious lip-syncer Ashlee Simpson came on the show and introducing Heidi Montag and Spencer Pratt with Beck's Loser.

Both of those were tongue and cheek — and directed to fixtures of popular culture. This is a presidential candidate, congresswoman, and a foster parent to more than 23 children. No matter what you think of Bachmann's political views, it's offensive that a house band would sneakily suggest a woman is a "b—" on national television.

If Fishbone only had come up with a ska song entitled: You Have Different Political Views Than Me — Many of Which I Find Utterly Misguided and Wrong-headed — But We Live in a Country Where We Are Allowed to Have Different Beliefs and So We Will Just Agree to Disagree. Also, It is Not Polite to Call a Woman a 'B—'.... Fallon and The Roots would not find themselves in this pickle. And it will be a pickle. A huge, massive pickle.

Not if you're Anthony Bourdain, globe-trotting gastronome and on-the-fly bon vivant. With no time to spare, you gorge on local cuisine, savour local sights and maximize exposure to indigenous culture. Tomorrow on the plane you can catch up on your sleep!

Honky tonk Town

► This isn't L.A., but there are plenty of (country) stars to gaze at ► Delight in Nashville's down-home feel

There's no shortage of twinkling celestial bodies in Nashville's night sky, but down on terra firma Music City USA has an abundance of human stars strolling its sidewalks.

Music is a multi-billion dollar industry in Nashville. With dozens of musical venues and scores of recording studios, Music City comes by its name honestly. There are so many stage, television and film stars living in and around Nashville, locals tend to treat the famous simply as neighbours.

It's the same if you're a tourist spending time at this popular destination. Nashville and the state of Tennessee have a delightful, unpretentious down-home feel for the visitor.

The city is the hub of pretty well every musical genre, and location of the immortal Grand Ole Opry and the Ryman Auditorium, where the likes of James Brown, Patsy Cline and Bruce Springsteen have thrilled generations of fans during its long history. While it might be a long way from rhinestones and elongated limos, the Bluebird Cafe is where you'll find many true hearts listening to a broad range of traditional music. The Bluebird is an intimate and inexpensive place to linger over a couple of beers and bask in the sounds created by topnotch professional singers and musicians.

For a city that's been called the buckle on the Bible belt (the city is home to the world's largest publisher of Bibles), Nashville has all the neon sparkle of a tourist town. However, you will also discover a deep cultural sophistication that will surprise you.

To experience these cultural roots, take time to visit the Frist Centre for the Visual Arts, the dramatic $20-million conversion of an Art Deco 1930s post office in downtown Nashville.

Over at the magnificent Schermerhorn Symphony Centre you could take in a Beethoven evening.

About 12 kilometres southwest of downtown, there's more elegant grandeur waiting to be discovered. Called Nashville's home of art and gardens, Cheekwood, once the private home and estate of the Cheek family (who founded the Maxwell House empire), provides visitors with a unique experience of art and gardens. Completed in 1932, Cheekwood is set in a beautiful 55-acre property and was opened to the public in 1960, with a dedication given by Senator Albert Gore, Sr. And then there are the must-see places that neighbour Nashville, such as Franklin. With its 15-block historic district, the city offers true Southern hospitality with a restored American "Main Street" and 200 years of rich history.

Pounding the pavement pays off

STUDENT VOICE

NAOMI ELMALEH
TALENTEGG.CA

I recently graduated from York University with a BA (Honours) in communications studies. I participated in many internships throughout my university career, had numerous part-time jobs, and I excelled academically.

I thought that finding a job when I graduated would be incredibly easy, since I was so motivated and enthusiastic about joining the workforce. But little did I know that this would not be the case.

I was eager to find a position in the field of communications and public relations in order to see if this type of work was right for me. Checking job boards was one of my daily

I applied and kept track of every resumé and cover letter I sent in — and it totalled over 90 in the span of five months. After only hearing back from six or seven, I was discouraged, furious, and upset with myself. I just had to find another way.

I found the best way to look for work was networking. I made use of all the resources and connections I had because I realized that you never know who might know of someone who is looking for someone.

I also found it helpful to go on informational interviews, which is calling or e-mailing someone from a company you would like to work for and asking if they would be willing to meet with you briefly.

You would be surprised to see how many professionals are willing to help out recent grads.

Feel free to ask them anything about their line of work, working at that company even ask if they can take a look at your resumé.

Sometimes they will take it with them and keep it on file.

My advice to recent graduates is to never feel discouraged. Finding a job is very time-consuming, and it takes a lot of hard work and dedication. If the search seems to be never-ending, don't give up. I know it sounds a little corny, but it's true.

Where Naomi is now

I am currently the director of communications and student programming at a supplementary school in Toronto.

I am very happy with my position and the organization I work for and I know that my time here will be very rewarding. I do hope to return to school to complete a post-graduate certificate in public relations and communications, as well as to continue my work in the non-profit sector in Toronto.

Tap into all the resources you can use: TalentEgg, LinkedIn, Facebook, friends, family, newspapers, networking events, and don't be afraid to put yourself out there.

Let employers see your enthusiasm, passion, hard-work ethic, and motivation. After months on the job hunt, I was finally offered a position at a great organization.

My recommendation for employers is to be more open-minded. A lot of job postings require a number of years worth of work experience in that field.

When you are a recent graduate looking for a job, this qualification seems very daunting.

WORKPLACE LAW

DANIEL LUBLIN

DAN@CANADA
EMPLOYMENTLAWYER.COM
TWITTER: @DANLUBLIN

It's possibly the worst rule in workplace law — corporations are permitted to insist that employees sign one-sided employment contracts that reduce their legal rights. Regrettably, employees with little bargaining power or an understanding of the law, seldom realize that their interests are being undermined. What are some of the more punitive contractual terms?

Probationary periods

New employees are not 'probationary' as a matter of law. They are only probationary if they agree to it in a contract. If they have, employers are then given the right to dismiss for reasons that would otherwise be insufficient and worse, by providing only minimum notice or pay, or often less.

Termination clauses

Without any language surrounding termination in the contract, employees are entitled to 'fair' severance upon their termination based on how long it would take to find another job. However, employers often draft contracts to provide employees with less than what is fair. Why would anyone to agree to this? Because they do not realize these terms can be negotiated or sometimes refused.

What should employees do? Review any new contract with a lawyer and don't be reluctant to renegotiate terms.

Return just the beginning

► Crosby has big plans for his Penguins after extend injury layoff

After making a spectacular four-point splash in his comeback game, a healthy Sidney Crosby has no plans to lower his goals.

The Penguins captain issued a warning yesterday to those tempted to dismiss his eye-popping performance in a 5-0 win over the New York Islanders as the byproduct of pent-up emotion, electric atmosphere and inferior opponent.

While the crowd of reporters around him was thinned considerably from 12 hours before, Crosby said he intends to get back to playing like he did last season. Before being sidelined with a concussion, with 32 goals and 66 points in 41 games, Crosby was on pace for the NHL's highest-scoring season since the mid-1990s.

"You look for ways to be motivated," Crosby said. "Sometimes they just kind of happen. For me, after going through this, I want to get back to where I was last season."

He added, "I know it's going to take some time."

Crosby finally appears to have health on his side. He is so convinced his concussion problems are behind him, he has no trips to his doctors currently scheduled.

The bar Crosby set last season was very high, how-

"It would be great, but I don't think it's possible, so it's not even something that is on my radar, to be honest with you."

ever.

When he left the lineup following hard hits to the head in successive games Jan. 1 and 5, Crosby had just ended a 25-game scoring streak and a December in which he scored 14 goals in 13 games.

Now that he's back, Crosby also will be driven by the Penguins' unspoken desire to be the NHL's best team.

The talent appears to be there — no team has three centres comparable to Crosby, Evgeni Malkin and Jordan Staal.

"Winning is always the constant motivating force," Crosby said.

Even if, for one night, Crosby's motivation appeared to be proving to the entire league that a serious concussion and a 61-game layoff that stretched over two seasons weren't enough to diminish the skills of hockey's biggest star. THE CANADIAN PRESS

MLB bucks the trend, signs CBA early

Baseball commissioner Bud Selig and union head Michael Weiner smiled and exchanged handshakes while others in the room dug into knishes and pigs in a blanket.

Not exactly the typical scene surrounding sports labour talks this year.

Baseball ensured itself of 21 consecutive years of peace at a time the NBA season might be cancelled because of a lockout and the NFL still is recovering from its CBA negotiations.

"We've learned," Selig said yesterday after players and owners signed an agreement for a five-year contract running until December 2016. "Nobody back in the '70s, '80s and the early '90s, 1994, would ever believe that we would have 21 years of labour peace."

The agreement makes MLB the first pro major league in North America to conduct blood tests for human growth hormone, allowing it during spring training and future off-seasons but for now only studying whether it will be implemented during the regular season.

The deal, which must be ratified by both sides and drafted into a formal contract, expands the playoffs from eight to 10 teams by 2013, lessens draft-pick compensation for free agents, expands salary arbitration by a few players and for the first time allows teams to trade some draft selections.

It also adds unprecedented restraints on signing bonuses for amateur players coming to the major leagues from high school, college and overseas.

Following eight work stoppages from 1972-95, baseball reached its third straight agreement without an interruption of play. The current deal was to expire Dec. 11.

Baseball seems to have learned the lessons of the 1994-95 strike, which wiped out the World Series for the first time in nine decades. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Braun brings home NL MVP

► Milwaukee star beats out Dodgers' Kemp ► Braun's teammate Fielder finished third, Upton was fourth

Ryan Braun sat alone on a balcony in his Malibu home that overlooks the Pacific Ocean, uneasy about his chances of winning the National League's Most Valuable Player award.

With the season Los Angeles' Matt Kemp had, he wasn't sure the call would come at all.

The phone rang all right, and Braun has been smiling ever since.

Braun was voted the NL MVP yesterday after helping the Milwaukee Brewers win their first division title in nearly 30 years.

"I'm not going to pretend like I wasn't anxious or nervous because I was," Braun said. "It's honestly

ceived 20-of-32 first-place votes and 388 points in voting announced by the Baseball Writers' Associa-

The 28-year-old Braun shared the news with his brother and girlfriend, who were at the house. He called his parents, then rang good friend Aaron Rodgers, the Green Bay Packers quarterback, and exchanged text messages with Kemp, the runner-up. "This really is a dream,"

Braun said. "This is beyond my wildest dreams to be in this position at this point in my career."

Kemp earned 10 first-place votes and 332 points. Braun's teammate Prince Fielder finished third with 229 points, and Arizona's Justin Upton finished fourth with 214 points.

Engine

Under the hood is an inline six-cylinder engine that delivers 325 horsepower and 345 pound-feet of torque. That's up 25 horsepower over the S60's standard six-cylinder turbo engine, which was the only engine available for the 2011 model year.

Also joining the lineup for 2012 is a new T5 base model with a 250-horsepower 2.5-litre five-cylinder turbo engine. Unlike the 3.0, which is mated to an all-wheel-drive system, the 2.5 comes only as a front-wheel-driver.

0-to-100 km/h

According to Volvo, the R-Design will achieve a zero-to-100 km/h time in about 5.5 seconds, quicker by 0.3 than the now mid-range S60 T6. By comparison, the 333-horsepower Audi S4 is about a half-second quicker still, if that helps put things in perspective.

A six-speed "Geartronic" automatic transmission directs the power to the front (T5) or all four wheels, which is the case with both T6 models.

Fashion statement

The easiest way to tell the T6 AWD R-Design from the rest of the line is by its blacked-out grille, lower chin spoiler and rear lower-body diffuser that's sandwiched between the twin exhaust pipes. A set of 18-inch "Ixon" alloy wheels makes a unique fashion statement.

The only R-Design logo you'll find is located in the grille area, which is a very subtle and elegant touch.

► The R-Design is largely a styling package with an additional 25 horsepower and some matching suspension tuning. The brakes are the same size as what you'll find on the lesser T6-AWD. The R-Design lists at $51,400, which is about $4,850 more than a T6 and more than $12,000 above the price of the base S60.

Safe, practical ... and a little wild

MALCOLM GUNN
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA
WHEELBASE MEDIA

It's always an internal struggle when your heart screams "sports car" but your head, along with the pleadings of significant others, requires something more practical.

Fortunately, Volvo offers a pleasant way to satisfy both sides of your nerve-racked conscience with the 2012 S60 R-Design.

The S60 demonstrated added style mixed with Swedish sensibility when it was launched for the 2011 model year.

At that time, Volvo announced that a more basic S60 would follow.

It has delivered on that promise, but in a surprise move, the automaker is also marketing a more aggressive-looking — and acting — performance version.

The T6 AWD R-Design is an extension of the same car that has gone further than just about any previous Volvo model since the 1960s P1800 coupe at removing Volvo's boxy stigma. For the R-Design, the front and rear end have been remodelled while leaving the surrounding sheetmetal mostly untouched.

The R-Design adds a more muscular dimension to what is one of Volvo's more popular models.

It's also one that can satisfy both the heart and the head of just about any driver.

Toyota marks Canadian anniversary at plant

A day after Toyota celebrated the start of Corolla production at its new Mississippi assembly plant in the United States, the big Japanese carmaker marked its 25th anniversary making vehicles in Canada last Friday.

Toyota Motor Manufacturing Canada hosted a celebration in the southwestern Ontario city of Cambridge, where the company began its Canadian operations in 1986.

At the time, the company estimated it would have 1,000 workers and produce 50,000 cars a year.

Today, the automaker operates three plants in Ontario and employs about 6,500 workers.

Last year, it built more than 458,000 Toyota and Lexus vehicles at plants in Cambridge and nearby Woodstock.

"(Toyota Motor Manufacturing) has become one of Toyota's largest, most successful manufacturing operations in the world," Toyota Corp. president Akio Toyoda said at the ceremony, attended by federal, provincial and local officials.

"It has done so by consistently exceeding expectations."

Ontario has seen traditional Detroit Three carmakers — GM, Ford and Chrysler — cut tens of thousands of jobs in the last decade as their parent companies restructured in the United States.

But Toyota and Honda have expanded their operations in Ontario, Canada's manufacturing heartland.

"Toyota is an essential part of Ontario's auto industry, and a big reason why the province continues to be the leading jurisdiction in North America for vehicle assembly," said Brad Duguid, Ontario's Minister of Economic Development and Innovation.

Still those companies have faced problems in Asia, where the March earthquake and tsunami and the recent massive flooding in Thailand have cut parts supplies and slowed down their global output, even in Canada.

On Thursday, a ceremony in Blue Springs, Miss. formally marked the recent start of production, almost five years after Toyota announced it would build a new plant in the tiny town in the sparsely populated hills of north Mississippi.

Chrysler 300 loved for affordable luxury

SECOND GEAR

JUSTIN PRITCHARD
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA

The latest Chrysler 300 left a huge mark on the market with handsome and classical styling when it hit Canadian roads some years ago — and it's been selling strong ever since.

By offering honest pricing, affordable luxury and a powertrain for any reason or season, Chrysler created an award-winning touring car that put the American luxury sedan back on the map.

2005 to 2010 Chrysler 300

Engines

Standard was a 3.5-litre V-6 with 250 horsepower. A 5.7-litre HEMI V-8 could be fitted with 340 horsepower. That figure climbed slightly towards the end of the generation. All-wheel drive was available with either engine.

What owners like

The 300's styling, available V-8 power, honest pricing and comfort levels attracted many shoppers to showrooms — while a plush ride, easy-to-use cabin and overall value sealed the deal.

What owners dislike

Common gripes included slippery handling on snow and ice (proper tires will help a lot here), sub-par gas mileage with either engine, and limited visibility.

Common issues

Powertrain problems are more likely to be electronics-related than mechanical in nature. Ensure no warning lights are illuminated, the engine runs smoothly, and all instruments work as expected. A "scan" of the 300's computer system is also suggested ahead of your purchase.

Have the underside of your potential used 300 checked for leaks, especially around the transmission and transfer case (if equipped with AWD).

Verdict

At the end of the day, lower-than-average resale values, high-class styling and available HEMI performance should make the Chrysler 300 a popular choice with budget-minded performance and luxury enthusiasts.
